Defense Institute of International Legal Studies-Resident Courses

Legal Aspects of Maritime Security Operations (LAMSO) (MASL P176009): This four (4) week course for military commanders, legal advisors, and their civilian counterparts provides a comprehensive overview of the legal aspects of maritime security operations and naval military operations and aims to enhance partner familiarity with international law of military operations and maritime law enforcement. Participants will analyze U.S. maritime law enforcement regulations and procedures and consider their potential applicability as a model for capacity development in their respective countries. Instruction will also include law of the sea, rules of engagement, law of armed conflict, and humanitarian assistance and disaster relief. LAMSO features visits to U.S. military installations to receive instruction from experts in the US Navy and Coast Guard and will take part in cultural familiarization activities under the DIILS Field Studies Program (FSP) in Newport, Boston and New York City.

Human Rights and The Law of Armed Conflict (HRLC) (MASL P176019): This four (4) week course for military commanders, legal advisors, and their civilian counterparts provides a comprehensive overview of the law of armed conflict and human rights. Participants focus on implementing their nation's commitment to adhere to international legal instruments that control the use of force and treatment of persons in the context of all types of military operations including those that involve international cooperation. Participants will also be able to identify human rights and law of armed conflict questions that arise in the context of military operations and will know the general areas of the law that serve as standards for resolving these questions. LCHR features visits to the United Nations and will take part in cultural familiarization activities under the DIILS Field Studies Program (FSP) in Newport, Connecticut and New York City.

Military Law Development Program (MLDP-I) (MASL P176026): This ten (10) week course offers military officers, military legal advisors, and their civilian counterparts a comprehensive military law curriculum, which includes attending the DIILS "Human Rights and Law of Armed Conflict" (HRLC), "Military Justice" (MJ) and "Legal Aspects of Combating Corruption" (LCC) courses. The human rights and law of armed conflict component covers international law, human rights law, law of armed conflict, and rules of engagement. The military justice component features advanced legal concepts in constitutional law, procedural due process, and use of legal codes through the study of international law and the comparative study of military law of other nations. The anti-corruption component covers deterrence, detection and punishment of corruption offenses.

Law of Military Operations (LOMO) (MASL P176027): This four (4) week course for military commanders, legal advisors and their civilian counterparts provides a comprehensive overview on the legal aspects of military operations and the constructive role legal advisors provide in military operational planning. LOMO focuses on the application of international legal standards to military operations, particularly the Law of Armed Conflict, Law of the Sea, Rules of Engagement, Status of Forces Agreements, Environmental Law, Counter-Terrorism and Counter-Piracy. Participants will gain significant understanding of the special challenges faced in the operational setting through an exercise that uses a video-based Fire Arms Training Simulator (FATS). This exercise tests the application of principles of International Law of Armed Conflict, Use of Force, and Rules of Engagement. LOMO features visits to the United Nations and will take part in cultural familiarization activities under the DIILS Field Studies Program (FSP) in Newport, Boston and New York City.

Legal Aspects of Combating Terrorism (LCT) (MASL P176028): This four (4) week course for military commanders, legal advisors and their civilian counterparts explores effective means for combating terrorism within the rule of law, with an emphasis on the importance of inter-agency cooperation. LCT is designed specifically for military officers and civilian officials who are currently, or who plan to be, involved in combating terrorism through law enforcement or military means. The course is designed to deepen understanding of the relevant law and the discussion of effective methods of combating terrorism thus making participants highly effective advisors to policy-makers, law enforcement, or military counter-terrorism practitioners. LCT covers the international law that applies to combating terrorism in each of its three contexts: internal disturbances (domestic crime); internal armed conflict (a common tactic of insurgents); and international armed conflict (such as against Al Qa'ida). Site visits and briefings are planned with the U.S. Coast Guard (maritime security), United Nations Combating Terrorism Committee Executive Directorate (anti-terrorism, consequence management), and an Emergency Management Operations Center (inter-agency coordination in crisis response). LCT features visits to the United Nations and will take part in cultural familiarization activities under the DIILS Field Studies Program (FSP) in Newport, Boston and New York City.

LCC builds more effective partner institutions to combat corruption by promoting interaction among participants and with policy-makers, corruption prevention experts and law enforcement officials. Themes for the LCC Resident Program include: Mechanisms of Transparency and Accountability, Standards of Conduct, Investigation and Prosecution of Corruption Offenses, the International Legal Framework for Anti-Corruption Programs, and International Cooperation and Assistance. LCC features visits to the United Nations and will take part in cultural familiarization activities under the DIILS Field Studies Program (FSP) in Newport, New York City and Washington DC.

LADSCA studies the COVID-19 pandemic and highlights the interagency challenges of coordination and cooperation in a domestic and international exercise embedded throughout the course. Participants will study criminal activity and information assurance as well as the way in which criminals utilize these technologies to their advantage. Experts review social media and surveillance methodologies as well as international responses to cyber intrusions. This includes studying current course transitions from domestic concerns to international challenges, including visits to several U.S. government agencies where participants will be instructed by current and former U.S. military and other government cyber experts and practitioners. Participants will review the application of international law to issues prevalent in the interconnected global economy and digital age, such as sovereignty, intervention and due diligence.
