DSCU Stakeholders and Friends,

Since the last Report Card in August, DSCA and DSCU marked major events, including DSCU's fifth anniversary, the launch of the Defense Security Cooperation Service (DSCS), the launch of Certification 2.0, the Institute for Security Governance's 30th anniversary, and the 2024 Security Cooperation Conference.

As I shared with the DSCU team, it is easy to get lost in the requirements of the daily grind—I certainly do—but milestones like I mentioned provide an opportunity to reflect on where we've come from and why it matters.

Congress and the Department of Defense (DOD) have mandated we reform security cooperation. DSCU's creation and continued evolution is part of that essential reform.

The security cooperation mission remains critical to our nation's security, and the importance of that mission and getting it right is what drives me forward every day. The world looks vastly different than it did five years ago, and we are rising to meet the challenge of this global reality. Allies and partners have never been more essential, and DSCU has a critical role to play in America's ability to develop and sustain those relationships. This endeavor will take constant growth and innovation.

Looking to the future, we are excited to fully execute updates to Title 10 U.S. Code Section 384 in the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) of Fiscal Year (FY) 2024. In FY 2025 DSCU will:

- Expand the Security Cooperation Workforce Development Program — Human Capital Initiative (SCWDP-HCI), including identifying, accounting for, and managing the career progression of the more than 15,000-person workforce.
- Continue to launch and refine Certification 2.0 curriculum at all proficiency levels across all functional areas to meet the needs of that dynamic and critical workforce.
- Establish the Foreign Military Sales Center of Excellence.
- Refine the management and provision of Institutional Capacity Building (ICB) services.
- Advance the profession of security cooperation through research, analysis, and lessons learned.

Thank you for your continued partnership; I'm excited to see what the next five years hold.

Special Feature: International Military Training and Education

DSCU is evolving to answer legislative mandates and prepare for future security cooperation strategic realities. Investments in international military training and education (IMTE) programs help build effective alliances and partnerships and reinforce DSCU's role as the center of intellectual life for the security cooperation enterprise.

DSCU's IMTE Division

Updates to Title 10 U.S.C. Section 384 in the NDAA of FY 2024 outline DSCU charter and mission requirements. Per the law, DSCU is charged with the management and implementation of international military training and education security cooperation programs and authorities executed by the DOD.

DSCU's IMTE division oversees the program execution and policy implementation of DOD and Department of State international training authorities, providing guidance and support across the international military training and education enterprise. By maintaining Chapter 10 of the Security Assistance Management Manual and convening interagency working groups on enterprise-wide training issues, the IMTE division ensures DSCU's continued leadership in the international training space. IMTE's efforts enable the planning, programming, and processing of the 70,000+ international students who will attend skill-focused training and professional education opportunities each year.

Additionally, the small program management teams within the IMTE division oversee implementation of specific programs and authorities, including:

- ★ DOD's Regional Centers for Security Studies (RC). The six RCs conduct educational, outreach, and research activities for mid- to senior-level international, inter-ministerial audiences. These include civilian government officials, military officers, parliamentarians, academics, and regional, non-governmental, and international organization leaders.
- ★ Regional Defense Fellowship Program (RDFP). RDFP programs include both short courses and 18-month master's courses that develop irregular warfare and combatting terrorism competencies for mid- to senior-level military and civilian government officials. RDFP's classroom instruction and research products provide a critical strategic complement to the tactical, kinetic, and professional military education (PME) courses taught by other DOD implementers.
- ★ Alumni Connectivity and Engagement. Building on existing alumni networking programs in DOD-funded programs, IMTE is supporting senior invitational PME schools in maintaining and leveraging relationships with international alumni. This effort increases the return on considerable U.S. and partner nation investments in sending personnel to attend PME opportunities.

Accountability: DSCU's Digital Transformation Team

By: Meaghan Summers and Coleen Pierce

DSCU holds itself accountable to a higher standard of security cooperation education and practice by building and using evidence-based knowledge to inform DSCU's operations, revamped curriculum, and teaching methodologies. One of many ways DSCU remains accountable is through digital transformation.

To develop innovative digital solutions to enhance productivity and streamline business processes across DSCU, DSCU's Digital Transformation Team is exploring options to replace the disparate portal systems DSCU components currently employ for travel, payroll, disbursing, transportation, logistics, acquisition, and accounting support, as well as other current faculty and operations applications.

With these goals set, DSCU recently held a three-day workshop at DSCU's Wright-Patterson Air Force Base campus to map out vital processes and identify problem areas or gaps in current process. Operations support and faculty teams were led through human-centered design techniques and were interviewed to identify challenges in the current process and how data, technology, or process automation might help alleviate those challenges and improve efficiency and effectiveness.

DSCU is committed to providing the best technological support for operations and faculty processes and workflows, and the support team prioritizes which digital features would have the largest impact on the organization.

DSCU will host additional workshops at its other campuses. Data will be synthesized, and measures will be implemented to ensure accountability and innovation across the organization!

Collaboration: "Building Lasting Partnerships: What Have We Learned?"

DSCU hosted the third annual Security Cooperation Conference, titled "Building Lasting Partnerships: What Have We Learned?" Oct. 28–30, 2024, at the Ronald Reagan Building and International Trade Center in Washington, DC. Approximately 500 security cooperation policymakers, scholars, and practitioners convened to bridge scholarship and practical knowledge, aiding the SCW to work more effectively and sustainably with allies and partners.

The three-day event observed the Chatham House Rule while fostering dialogue, analysis, and critical inquiry to increase collaboration across the security cooperation enterprise during and after the forum. An overarching theme was the generational challenge of the security cooperation enterprise: to develop security cooperation capabilities, together with those of our allies and partners, to sustain and strengthen an international system to meet tomorrow's threats.

This year's conference call for proposals focused on the following five issue areas and considered proposals from across the community that formed the various panel sessions and presentations:

1. Understanding the Partner
2. Navigating Partnership Engagement Dynamics
3. Managing Allied Partnerships
4. Organizing for Partnership Success
5. Partnering in Contested Environments

Faculty from DSCU's Brigadier General Charles Young Research, Analysis, and Lessons Learned Institute organized the conference. Additional information about annual conferences, including previous conference reports, can be found here: <https://dscu.edu/bgcy-ralli/sc-conference>.
